

RELATIONAL NETWORKING

STRATEGIES TO FORGE COLLABORATIVE RELATIONSHIPS ACROSS DIVIDES

"It's all about relationships" is an adage we seem to all agree on, but when it comes to HOW to build quality relationships, particularly across a diverse community, we can all use help!

Extension is piloting a new series of trainings to build leaders' abilities to more effectively forge productive relationships across perceived divides, communicate effectively to deepen lasting ties, and spur collaborative efforts that advance the health and vibrancy of community.

We call this "relational networking," and it focuses on quality of relationships, rather than quantity. Networks are important in creating community change, but the quality and depth of the relationships within your network are even more important to enacting lasting and transformative community change.

This is a 6-course workshop that will meet virtually between October 5th and October 16th. For registration details, contact your local Extension Community Development Educator.

LOCATION: Course meets virtually

DATE: Every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, October 5th through October 16th

TIME: 3:30 – 4:30 p.m.

CONTACT: Jessica Jane Spayde, Community Development Educator

 (608) 326-0223

 spayde@wisc.edu

 crawford.extension.wisc.edu

LEARNING OUTCOMES

Learn new frameworks and develop new skills to employ in building your professional network.

Highlight current and past interpersonal successes while refining existing capacities to build trust, think reflexively and deepen relationships.

Practice using relational networking principles in your everyday life.

Extension
UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN-MADISON